This is a two-story asymmetrical Queen Anne style dwelling built ca. 1890. The house has a hipped roof of asphalt shingles, a brick foundation, an interior brick chimney and an exterior of weatherboard. On the main (N) elevation is a two-story projecting gable bay with chamfered corners on the second story. In the gable fields and below the second story windows are scalloped shingles. Adjacent to the projecting gable bay on the main façade is a gable roof entry porch with square wood posts and a milled wood railing slightly reconstructed ca. 1950 from its original 1890s appearance. The porch has canvas awnings and in the gable field is a decorative arched wood molding. The main entrance has two-light glass and wood double doors and a rectangular single-light transom. The first floor of the projecting gable bay on the main façade has a large single-light window with a rectangular transom flanked by one-over-one narrow double hung wood sash windows. Each of these windows has interior louvered wood shutters, as do most windows on the first floor. On the east elevation is an original, one-story polygonal bay with eight-light glass and wood windows and one-over-one double hung wood sash. Windows in the dwelling are one-over-one double hung wood sash.

Located to the rear of the dwelling is ca. 1920, single-bay, frame garage with a gable roof of asphalt shingle, a weatherboard exterior and an original twelve wood panel overhead track door. Contributing
