

208 W. Lake Street – Contributing

Located at 208 W. Lake Street is a two-story asymmetrical Queen Anne style dwelling built in 1891 as the residence for the Dell Loomis family. The house has a stucco-covered brick foundation, a hipped roof of asphalt shingles, exterior of weatherboard siding and a ca. 1950 exterior wall brick chimney on the west façade. On the main (S) and east façade is a ca. 1920, sun porch with an entrance with an eight-light and two-panel door and square wood columns on stone and concrete piers. Windows in the sun porch are fixed, four- and eight-light design. On the west façade is an original, hipped roof porch enclosed with screen panels, weatherboard siding, an original wood and screen door and square wood columns. Windows in the dwelling are original, one-over-one rectangular wood sash. The projecting bay on the main façade has a bay window on the first floor with a pent roof of scalloped and sawtooth wood shingles. The window has a fixed light with stained glass sidelights and transom. In the gable field of the main façade are scalloped wood shingles. At the southeast corner is a two-story tower with a pyramidal roof. The windows on both floors of the tower are also of fixed, single-light design with stained glass transoms and sidelights. The tower also features eave brackets, milled panels, and pellet molding. Between the projection bay and tower on the main façade are raised decorative panels with bull's eye corner blocks. The tower's roof has triangular decorative panels with the Masonic symbol. On the west façade is a ca. 1920, frame shed roof porch with square wood posts and screen panels.

To the northeast of the house is a ca. 1920 frame garage with an exterior of shiplap siding, original hinged glass and wood garage doors, a frame pedestrian door, four-light fixed glass and wood windows and exposed eave brackets. Contributing
