This is a two- and one-half-story rectangular American Foursquare dwelling built ca. 1910. The house has a hipped roof of asphalt shingles with a small wood baluster widow's walk at the peak, a weatherboard exterior, a central interior brick chimney and a continuous stone foundation. On the main façade is a single-story, full-width porch with Tuscan wood columns and a ca. 1990, wood baluster railing. The main entrance is centrally located on the main façade within a square projecting entry bay and retains its original, single-light glass and wood door with a single-light transom. Windows in the dwelling are original, one-over-one double hung wood sash with simple wood cornice surrounds on the first floor and wood surrounds on the second floor. The second story of the main façade has a central circular window set in a wood frame. At the roofline of the main (N) façade is a gable roof dormer with gable returns and paired, one-over-one double hung wood sash windows with multi-diamond light upper sashes.

To the rear of the dwelling is an original, frame, single-bay garage with a front gable roof of asphalt shingles, a vertical board exterior and a ca. 1945, sixteen-wood panel overhead track door. Contributing
